Pelago Unveils Intervals

Web-based task and time management helps small businesses get a handle on where their time is being spent

Santa Barbara, CA – June 1, 2006 – Pelago launched Intervals, web-based task, time, and project management. Intervals was originally an internal project geared at solving Pelago's own struggles tracking time, billing clients, and knowing where projects stood in real-time.

Intervals is ideal for service companies that bill based on hourly work, freelancers, and small businesses, but can be used by anyone that needs to manage tasks and track time. Intervals marries task management with easy-to-use timers to get accurate information about where time is being spent.

Pelago recently completed a successful three month beta program with Intervals. "I've needed this for so long. Intervals is quickly showing me where my time is going for good or bad", Garth Humbert, beta program participant and principal of Carom (brand, print, and web communication). "It is super easy to get up and running! I was tracking clients, projects, time and money in a matter of minutes."

Intervals Highlights:

- Hosted application (no software to install)
- Use it anywhere in the world that has an Internet connection
- No annual commitment (month-to-month)
- First 30 days free (try it before you buy it)
- Prices range from $20 per month to $175 per month

Answer questions like:

- Are we billing enough hours to break even?
- Are we over budget yet?
- Is our team being maximized?
- What the heck have I been working on?
- How much work did we get done this week?
